

Process Management Level

Process management

Process management is the ensemble of activities of planning and monitoring the performance of a process. The term usually refers to the management of business processes and manufacturing processes. Business process management and business process reengineering are interrelated, but not identical.

Process specification

Organize business processes, defining process content and the links between the various aspects of the transition relation to form a seamless service for all businesses during normal operation

Process optimization

For companies at any time, the process of continuous optimization, continuous optimization of business processes and examine the processes and make improvements and strengthen the process system.

Process reengineering

Redesign business processes. Period of change for business and enterprise transformation stage: changes in the structure of governance, mergers and acquisitions, changes in business strategy, business model changes, new technologies, new processes, new products appear, the emergence of new markets.