The customer experience is defined by the service process, regardless of whether your company produces things or provides services. It will either result in client contentment, referrals, and repeat business, or it will result in customer dissatisfaction. It is critical for you to be in charge of the service process as a business owner or manager. Because the way we service our customers is so vital, a methodical process that gives a company an edge over its competitors is required. Even if your goods and services are relatively comparable to those of your competitors, the method you serve your customers (the service process) might give you an advantage. If you work in the service industry, the service process is much more critical.
